

Childhood Magic

I remember butterflies.
Hundreds on the summer evening,
Alighting on the warm concrete
Before the gingerbread front porch.

As a nightly ritual,
And with quiet, gentle movement,
A humble i would join them,
Bowing in sacred communion.

Becoming concrete was a blessing.